Charles Christophe Windisch, from rue de la Roquette to the Royal Manufactory at Ixelles
A talented draughtsman as well as a chemist, he was responsible for the preparatory drawing for this bowl and another that we will be offering for sale shortly. The white was most likely made in the family factory at 102 rue de la Roquette. The dating of the model is fairly precise: it may have been produced entirely in Paris after the 1810s or produced in Paris and then decorated in Brussels before 1830 and the break-up of the partnership between C C Windisch and Faber. In 1824, these two great names founded a highly talented factory in Ixelles, which soon won a royal privilege.

Notes :

Preparatory drawings in private hands

For a similar bowl, see the Demeuldre collection, successor to the Ixelles factory.
