Description

Magnificent quality portrait of a lady from the very end of the 18th century, English school in the style of the painter George Romney (1734-1802). This oil on canvas in its Louis XVI period frame is in very good condition, 2 small old restorations are visible on the reverse. The painter's talent is brilliantly expressed in the gentle expression of this magnificent woman and in the virtuoso treatment of the dress. The palette stands out from the bright colors of French portraits from the reigns of Louis XV and Louis XVI with a harmony of greens and browns which announce the emerging romantic style. It comes from a castle near Lyon. General conditions of sale and delivery: An invoice and a certificate of authenticity will be issued in your name and address.
