Description

Oil on canvas from the 19th century school. This work depicts an angler and his wife on the banks of a river. The latter, seated, seems to be holding a discussion with her companion totally absorbed in preparing his fishing rod. In the background, we can see a bridge hiding the opposite bank.

This canvas is highlighted by a gilded frame decorated with cord, pearl and frieze of acanthus leaves. This rustic painting will appeal to art lovers.  Period: Late 19th century
