Description

Charming little painting from the very beginning of the 20th century, signed L. Breton and dated 1905, lower right.
Figurative representation of a small mountain shepherd in traditional clothing in use at the end of the 19th century.
The little character in a beautiful pose stands firmly on his legs, slightly swayed, with both hands he firmly holds his stick resting on the back of his neck. He is dressed in a fur vest and carries a leather bag slung over his shoulder.
Here is a beautiful little rural scene that does not lack a certain character. Please note that this painting has just undergone a little cleaning; it was so dirty that we could no longer distinguish its colors under a very yellowed varnish.
