Description

Magnificent and high quality Antique Katana-kake from the end of the Edo Period (late 19th century). Antique Katana-kake (horizontal support 2 swords). The main decoration in Takamori-maki-e (3D decoration sprinkled with gold powder) represents a harmonious scene representing a Shishi (lion or Komainu) in the middle of flowering peonies, in a mountain landscape, whose finesse of the decoration demonstrates the great mastery of Urushi lacquer. The base is a traditional Urushi lacquer in Nashiji. The Shishi (lion) is a symbol of protection, because it is the guardian of Shinto shrines and/or Buddhist temples, whose mission is to ward off evil spirits. For Takamori Maki-e, Sumi-ko powder (charcoal) and Suzu-ko powder (tin) are placed, to give a lot of volume. After
