Description

miniature on France paper, exceptional execution of a perhaps historic event in the moonlight, we can see the passage of a carriage with troops and people following the procession, in the background would appear the Notre Dame church, on the right side you can see a flag flying on a building, the flag appears to be that of the first French empire, you can see the details of the characters and the shadows and moonlight which create an appearance of a nighttime party. There are a few wet spots on the miniature (maybe they can be removed). the miniature is incorporated between two tempera maps on paper from the early 19th century.
