Description
-------------

Two white marble busts, pair portraits of two teenage sisters. The sculptor manages to convey the freshness and liveliness of their youth. Their hairstyles and corsages are typical of the early 20th century. R. Vlach, whom we have not found, is probably from the family of the sculptor Jan Vlach (1904-1962), the artist who created the Czech Lion of the Consulate in Paris, who previously, in Czechoslovakia, had sculpted various large characters from the First Czech Republic.
