Description
-------------

Pair of large vases with swollen bodies, or potiches, in Canton porcelain, with polychrome decorations of court or palatine scenes, with characters dressed in traditional clothing, birds and flowers.

Each vase presents an alternation of cartridges, with a cartridge representing either dignitaries during a banquet, or ladies of companies, some holding a fan, then a cartridge decorated with birds on their branches, butterflies, foliage and flowers.

On the top of the collar, these scenes and decorations are repeated with a slight nuance. Each vase rests on its turned and blackened wooden base, round in shape.

Work realized circa 1950.
