Description

Blanche Odin (1865-1954): "The basket of chestnuts", watercolor 36 We are proud to present to you today this adorable watercolor of chestnuts fallen from an overturned basket waiting to be debugged, a few leaves at the end of a branch balancing the composition... A photograph of the back before editing with various annotations of the hand of the Artist is attached. A museum piece. If Redouté was the greatest flower watercolorist of the first half of the 19th century, Blanche Odin (1865-1957) is the greatest of the first half of the 20th century. If, of course, it is her roses which have ensured, in a very well-deserved way, her reputation, she excelled in the representations of all kinds of flowers as we can see in the excellent works of Monique Pujo-Monfran or by visiting the Salies de
