Description

This item offers, at each end, two ink receptacles, with lids with delicately carved top buttons with fleur-de-lis and pearl motifs. The perimeter of these receptacles is perforated. The center of this inkwell has a small feather reserve hidden under a rectangular openwork element topped with a small gilded bronze hippogriff sculpture. The front includes a cavity for resting pens and fountain pens. The sides offer two moving side handles that transform into small feet. Still functional today, this writing accessory will bring character to a desk, secretary or any writing space of your choice.  Period: Late 19th Century Excellent condition.
