Paris of the Belle Epoque. Reputed to be the epitome representing "street children are lovely and elegant and alluring women" opposite the painter Fernand Pelel.

The elegant Parisienne is shown dressed in the style of Parisian fashion of 1900. She is dressed in an elegant and sober collared dress and holding an umbrella to amain a small fruit basket.

The painting is made with breathtaking realism both in the representation of this young woman through many details of her hair, her dress, her jewelry and accessories, and in the environment that surrounds it.

Dimensions: 75 x 52 cm without the frame and 104 x 76.5 cm with its setting XIX Louis XV style.
