Description

Dating from the 17th century, this rare wooden decorative element, probably from the liturgical furniture of a church, embodies the artistic elegance of the period. Sculpted with finesse, it features delicate acanthus leaves, symbols of prosperity. Two bas-reliefs adorn the room, representing Saint Peter with the keys of paradise and Saint Paul brandishing a sword. Every detail, crafted with precision, testifies to the exceptional talent of the artisans of this period. This object, beyond its decorative beauty, carries within it the history and spirituality of the 17th century. It captures the aesthetic of the era while symbolizing faith through the holy figures depicted there. A rare piece, preserving the splendor of the past and allowing the timeless fusion of art and devotion to shine through.
