Description

Description of the antiquity: "Burma, beginning of the 20th century, large bronze Shan Buddha and his worshipers." Burma, Shan ethnic group, beginning of the 20th century, unusual, superb and important bronze altar Buddha represented seated in the position of taking the earth as a witness (bhumisparsha mudra) on a large base representing an inverted double lotus. The face, with half-closed eyes and a discreet smile, is imbued with great serenity. The crown is typical of Shan Buddhas, very high with long points. It gives a surplus of nobility to the subject. On either side, at the level of his legs, two kneeling and mobile worshipers are fixed on rings. Very good quality piece both in terms of the quality of the cast iron and the attention paid to details. Height 50 cm. Width 24.5 cm.
