A four-sided glass-fronted desk regulator clock with a striking mechanism and date display. The case is made of oak veneered with Cuban mahogany, with solid mahogany and ebony moldings. The very thick veneer testifies to the quality of its manufacture and its excellent state of preservation. It rests on four flattened ball feet in gilt bronze. The bezel is in chased and gilt bronze. The white enamel dial is signed Morize in Paris, with Roman numerals for the hours and Arabic numerals for the date. It has blued steel hands in the "Bréguet" style, and a sweep second hand. The movement features a "chevilles" escapement on the outer plate, a compensated balance striking the half-second, and a metal suspension. *Height 51.5 cm, width 26.5 cm, depth 16.5 cm. Balance weight 1.165 kg. Empire
