Description

Neo-Romanesque style altar candlestick in bronze derived from an assembly (casting) of original models from the Romanesque period, 12th century.

In the taste of the production of

Adolphe-Napoléon Didron (1806-1867)

This testimony illustrates the taste at the Restoration period for a revival of old styles.

This candlestick is solidly seated on a large tripod base, three beast legs attached to dragon bodies.

The shaft is made up of two rods stapled with hooks interposed between three nodes, the middle one of which is exposed.

The pools are buttressed by three small winged dragons.

A model close to this candlestick is referenced and listed under number 36 in the manual of
