Description

Small snack table, flying table that can form a bedside table or small living room table in solid cherry wood from the Louis XV period.
it consists of a facade opening with two leaves and including its original metal lock and latches. the lock works and the key has been remade.
Opening the leaves provides plenty of storage space. the top is made of white marble embedded in the uprights and crosspieces.
there is a small restoration of 2 cm on the north side of the marble on the facade visible in the photos.
the embedded marble forms a cabaret tray with the scalloped crosspieces overflowing on three sides.
the facade is doubly curved.
the uprights end in curved Louis XV legs of beautiful finesse and beautiful proportions right to the end of the legs.

one side has a long, low drawer mounted with dovetails, the bottom of which was changed in the 20th century.

the three sides are nicely worked with scalloped crosspieces.

note the nice recess between the upper part with leaves and the lower part comprising the base and the drawer, it is a very aesthetic and elegant detail. the keyholes are original.

beautiful waxed patina in blond walnut color and preventive treatment carried out with xylophene in the workshop.

a delightful Louis XV period flying table, worked and beautiful on each of its sides.
