Elchinger

Céramiques Elchinger is a family business that Wendelin Elchinger (1809-1895) founded in 1834 in Soufflenheim (Alsace). Production was initially dedicated to culinary pottery. Fernand Elchinger (1911-1975) developed and modernized the factory and installed the first continuous-fire electric furnace. Driven by the craze for Vallauris ceramics, the Alsatian factory achieved strong notoriety with the production in the 1950s of vases and pitchers with refined
