Description

Beautiful solid mahogany parquet bookcase with a large central projecting part, composed of two glass doors decorated with floral sculptures in the upper part. These solid-framed doors are fitted with beveled rectangular tiles joined by brass crosspieces. In the upper part, the tiles form an elegant half-arch. When opened, we discover 4 adjustable shelves on racks. On each side, the side doors are made of panels with molded frames. Inside, we discover new shelves on racks. The sides of this piece of furniture are fitted with flowerbed panels. The latter is also topped with a molded recessed cornice. This bookcase benefits from ideal proportions and great roominess. The refinement of the Belle Époque shines through in this refined piece of furniture.  Period: Late 19th century Excellent condition after
