Description

Beautiful bronze sculpture made with the lost wax technique, which depicts a Bathing Venus. The red Bardiglio marble base adds a touch of elegance and refinement to the work. The sculpture, from the early 19th century, presents a realistic depiction of the goddess Venus: her soft and sinuous body is modeled with great skill, while the expression of her face is delicate and serene. The Bathing Venus is represented as she covers her breasts with one arm and her lower abdomen with a veil that reaches her feet, creating an atmosphere of intimacy and modesty. The author of the sculpture is H.S. München, whose signature is visible on the base of the work. It is a work of art of great value and beauty, which conquers the viewer with its grace and artistic perfection.
