Description

This engraving represents The Temptation of Saint Antoine inspired by Jacques Callot. The engraving is almost identical to that made by Jacques Callot. The details are a little less precise, but the main composition remains the same. It is inspired by the 3rd or 4th state of this engraving by Callot, visible by the number of rosettes in the coat of arms. The coat of arms is that of Louis XIII's Secretary of State, Philippe Phélipeaux. The differences lie in the details and the legend. Presence of a foxing from the bottom center to the right.
