alongside them, and quickly, he designed dresses and coats, made with original fabrics, collaborating, in particular with Sonia Delaunay. Success was achieved, and in 1930, the workshop became the Jacques Heim fashion house. In 1932, Jacques Heim launched "Atome", a two-piece swimsuit, a precursor to the bikini, as well as cotton evening dresses. In 1953, he was the victim of a major burglary at his home, located at 17, Villa de Madrid in Neuilly-sur-Seine. Under the presidency of General de Gaulle, he became the official couturier of his wife, Yvonne de Gaulle. His most prominent clients included Sophia Loren, Queen Fabiola of Belgium, Mamie Eisenhower and actress Gloria Swanson.
