Small clock in working order, in gilded bronze in Louis XVI style, from the 19th century.

The decoration of the clock takes on the attributes of the Louis XVI style.

A beaded oval medallion surrounds two kissing birds, symbolizing Spring in Love.

The medallion is held by a garland of flowers joining the sides of the clock.

The central enameled dial is marked "HOPILLIART" and located at "12 rue des Saints-Pères Paris".

The bezel protecting the dial is made of beveled glass. Note 2 small accidents on the periphery of the glass on its internal side (see photo).

The clock is surmounted by a vase on a pedestal with ram's heads.
