Description

Didactic anatomical model in hand-painted plaster circa 1890 depicting a human heart. Engraved with the maker's mark Franz Josef Steger and Carl Ernst Bock: "Bock Steger - Lips". The notation "Lips" stands for Leipzig. The model is on an enlarged scale to provide a better view for learning.

Sculptor Franz Josef Steger (1845 - 1938) collaborated with anatomist-pathologist Carl Ernst Bock (1809 - 1874) at Leipzig University to produce models for student teaching. These were either direct casts or sculptures in plaster, porcelain or wax. Steger is also known for his study of the early use of plastics. Steger's instructive models were sold through international catalogs and scientific stores in
