Description

Imposing bronze wall fountain in Louis XV style, from the end of the 19th century. The top, decorated with two Puttis intertwining a lion's head from whose mouth water comes out. The two Puttis rest on the basin in the shape of a large font with edges decorated with acanthus leaves, and a medallion in its center. Under the basin, two newts whose plumed tails encircle a large shell, all resting on a moving base. The basin has a water outlet, but since the previous owners used it as a planter, the bottom was pierced several times, as can be seen in the photos. Beautiful verdigris patina.
