Description

Splendid plates and a dish with a scrolled edge decorated with flowers on stems probably multicolored dahlia flowers and smaller scattered bouquets. As if suspended, a different flower or in a different position depending on the plate enlivens the pool. The wing covered with shells, acanthus leaves and foliage in relief, typical of the Art Nouveau period, is richly outlined with gold brushwork on the edge. An abundant floral decoration whose main bouquet measures nearly 14 cm develops following the curve of the marli and is organized according to a ternary rhythm already experimented by several large manufacturers a few years previously (see the famous Rousseau Service). They will make your table unique, refined and beautiful. These plates are old and have been used but remain in very
