Émile Just Bachelet (1892-1981) studied at the École des Beaux-Arts in Nancy until 1912 where he was a student of Jules Larcher for drawing and Ernest Bussièrès for sculpture. He then studied at the École Supérieure des Beaux-Arts in Paris. He is one of the sculptors who worked extensively on the creation of memorials at the end of the First World War. From 1920, he exhibited at the Salon des Artistes Français. At the end of the Decorative Arts Exhibition of 1925, Émile-Just Bachelet received a gold medal for his collaboration with Henriot. Mathurin Méheut that Bachelet entered the factory. What is less known is that Émile Just Bachelet and Louis-Henri Nicot were the first artists who allowed the Henriot factory to begin producing earthenware statuettes. In Quimper, Bachelet deals with religious subjects or illustrates daily life. His collaboration with the Henriot factory took place between 1924 and 1930, knowing that the majority of models were created in the first two years. But Bachelet does not only collaborate with the Henriot factory. He also worked at the Lunéville earthenware factories, for Mougin in Nancy, for St Clément and at the famous Sèvres Manufacture where he was cited from 1931 to 1936 as a sculptor. Apart from his rich collaboration with Quimper, Émile-Just Bachelet has a brilliant national career.
