It has on the front a large palmette formed of three rudentées parts with curled bottoms, framed with foliage from which foliage delicately sculpted. At the bottom, a perforated cartridge framed by foliated "cuir découpé" motifs, with finely worked funds; the central part, slightly swollen, in cushion, is decorated with braces with florets on a pattern of "grains d'orge" delicately incised. The tray has in its lower part an arabesque carving and powerful gadroons. The "cul de lampe" is formed of three beautiful acanthus.

Italy, eighteenth century

The quality of the carving on this console table is quite remarkable.

The plant motifs, characteristic of early 18th century Italy and the French Regency period, are carved with rare virtuosity, resulting in a composition that is both symmetrical and naturalistic in its execution.

The backgrounds are delicately braced, while the carving of the cartouche is executed with mastery and finesse, in the delicacy of the foliage, the chasing of the barley grain and the fine lacework of the foliage. The cartouche with its cut-out leather motifs and the lattice work are also of great aesthetic originality, harking back to the Italian Cinquecento and the French 17th century.
