Description

"Napoleon on prancing horse," painted terracotta, 19th century era

Large, Beautiful and refined sculpture depicting Napoleon, which is based on the famous painting by Jacques-Louis David. In his most famous figure of Napoleon crossing the Alps.

Heroic, imperious, alone in command, a work that has the power of a classical sculpture the general leads his army through the highest mountains in Europe, to conquer the Italian peninsula and a prominent place in history. Like Hannibal riding on an elephant, like Alexander the Great on his Bucephalus, he mounts a fiery steed that rears up in the face of a path steep with difficulty. But the horseman firmly masters the
