Description

Very good quality of execution for this pair of Empire armchairs in blond mahogany from the early 19th century.

The armrest consoles are finely sculpted with a dolphin's head whose tail rises elegantly to outline the butt of the armchair. They are joined to the base by connecting strips decorated with a stylized palmette.

A stylized fleur-de-lys sculpture connects the armrests to the backrest uprights. These are inclined for better seating comfort.

The rear feet are sabre-shaped, but we will particularly note the rarity of the front feet made of a lion's shank with claws.
