Description

Pair of large Louis XVI style armchairs in lacquered wood, from the very beginning of the 19th century. These shepherdesses are painted in green-gray tones. This is their original paint, the latter therefore shows traces of wear and use revealing the wood in places, thus giving a limed and romantic effect to the whole. The woodwork is in good condition and very stable. Only a few small gaps should be noted (in particular at the back of one of the armchairs, small restoration - see photo 10) These seats are very enveloping, comfortable and well upholstered. Raspberry-colored velvet covering fabric.
