* Paul Jacquet was born in Pers Jussy on June 23, 1883.

After a happy childhood, he became a teacher, like his father, while preparing to become a drawing teacher. At the Beaux-Arts in Geneva, he became passionate about the chiaroscuros of Rembrandt and the prints of Hokusai. He became an enthusiastic teacher and remained so until his retirement.

Passionate about ceramics, but being a civil servant, he could not trade in them on a large scale, so he created a workshop in Savoie, around 1913. He carried out the two activities jointly throughout his life.
