lighting, such as Esperia, Stilux, and Stilkronen.

His most recognizable creations, such as the industrial-style lamps made of brass and lacquered metal with adjustable light beam, are produced by the Milanese company Lumi (with which some big names of made in Italy collaborated, from Gio Ponti to Nanda Vigo), while Fabbrica Apparecchi Illuminazione Greco S.p.A. made for Torlasco the street lamp Genova 4053, with which he won the Compasso d'Oro in '59. Metal, the common denominator of his pieces, is also used by Torlasco for lamps and chandeliers of a distinctly more eclectic taste, usually combined with marble, Murano glass and crystal.
