Description

gouache on paper, detail of the frescoes of Pompeii, late 19th century. With the discovery of the frescoes of Pompeii, their representation on the artistic scene multiplied throughout Europe. In this case, a delicate and precise architecture accompanied by decorative and plant elements where what appears to be the Roman goddess Juventas appears with her jug from which the water of youth flowed. We can see in the same article how the artist proposes the creation of another architectural space without finishing it, with great delicacy in the pencil drawing. This piece is reminiscent of those made by Luigi Bazzani at the end of the 19th century.
