Son of a wine merchant, André Dignimont first studied with the Oratorians of the Collège de Juilly before studying language in England. The return to France in 1911 led him to seven years in the regiment: three years of military service, four years of war. André Dignimont was then a student of Tony Robert-Fleury at the Académie Julian. Installed in Montmartre, he then led "the joyful life of rapins" in the company of fellow students and friends,
