Description

Pretty little table from the end of the 17th century and beginning of the 18th century in solid walnut and oak. It rests on four legs turned into a baluster and connected together by an H-shaped spacer.

This has some traces of wear due to its age (see photos). Our table opens on the front with a small drawer in the belt, probably modified in the 1900s. The top was also redone at the same period. This piece of furniture is in good general condition, it has old traces of wood-burning and some wear, but we remind you that this charming table comes to us from the end of the 17th century - beginning of the 18th century....
