Description

In this painting Memoirs of Greece, Hydra, the Catalan painter Joan Carles Roca Sans combined the expressionist and synthetic currents.

With abundant work made from notes and sketches taken during his various stays in the Greek islands, Roca Sans shows how with a schematic and synthetic approach and a limited number of colors, he can achieve an expressive work, full of sensitivity. facing the subject represented.

This magic is achieved by the painter after a long journey of pictorial research which characterizes his style very well. In this Greek port of Hydra, all the colors find their freedom and thus give
