Description

This wrought iron chandelier from the 1950s perfectly embodies the elegance and refinement of the period. Adorned with finely crafted acanthus leaves, it stands out for its abundant decoration in the shape of fruits such as pears and apples, as well as delicate little leaves in crystal glass. These glass elements capture and refract light, creating a sparkling and warm ambiance. Made up of six lights, this chandelier not only illuminates the space, but also adds an artistic and sophisticated touch, demonstrating exceptional craftsmanship.
