Description

Already a regular in the aviaries of the bourgeoisie in the second half of the 19th century, the callopsite parakeet did not fail to be the subject of a subject by the bronze makers of Vienna. Here placed on a wooden base, its bronze plumage is enhanced with colors, a coveted specialty of Viennese productions. Paris, London and New York were particularly fond of these decorative objects which were perched on the furniture of living rooms, bedrooms or reception rooms.
Our animal bronze is in very good condition.
