Description

Charming representation of an abandoned portal, of a villa in Rome around 1900, at a time when galloping urbanization had not razed many magnificent details of the past. I thank a Roman friend who located this relic of baroque elegance for me, near villa Alban, perhaps even a portal of the magnificent villa, destroyed by the extension of the city. maybe it still exists? I thank anyone who can tell us. A native of Aix myself, I am fascinated by these little wonders forgotten at the entrance to sumptuous summer properties, and by the sweet, fleeting pleasures of which they were the elegant ambassadors. located "Porte Rome"
