Charming little decagonal shaped tray from the 18th century, composed of a black and Chinese gold lacquer panel, with an oxblood red border. One of the characters is seated and is served tea by the second. It is supported by a shield representing a coat of arms, probably that of the sponsor of this very refined piece. The rear is lacquered red and has a suspension hook (not original). Good general condition, despite some small gaps and cracks. Dimensions: 33.5 x 22.5 cm
