Description

Selection of 3 Gogottes de Fontainebleau fragments. On modern black oak base. Les Gogottes de Fontainebleau, a rare masterpiece of natural art from the Fontainebleau region of France. Forged over millennia in the depths of the earth, this unique geological sculpture dates back to the Oligocene, approximately 30 million years ago. Primarily composed of silica sand anchored by calcite or aragonite, this formation has a complex, porous texture that tells the geological story of the dissolution and precipitation of minerals in caves and underground cavities.
