Description

This pair of cast iron vases is a fine example of the decorative art of the Napoleon III era. Each vase is decorated with a lion's head, symbolizing strength and majesty, holding a handle in their mouth. The upper edge of the vases is delicately shaped into a wave shape, adding a touch of movement and elegance to the whole. The old cast iron used in their manufacture testifies to the robustness and durability of these pieces, which have survived the ages while retaining their original charm and beauty. These vases are not only utilitarian objects but also true works of art, perfect for adding a touch of grandeur and history to any indoor or outdoor space.
