Description

Corinthian capital in white hard stone carved with lobed foliage, missing elements and the rest of an old restoration which has disappeared with a wrought iron rod fixed by a casting of lead. Restoration that I left voluntarily, because it is part of the The history of the piece by showing the technique formerly used to repair broken elements. It also has on the left side a trace of dark gray paint which must be a remnant of paint which was formerly decorated by covering the stone. All in fairly good condition considering its age. POSSIBILITY OF SENDING, careful reinforced packaging, registered with signature, insurance and tracking on the internet by its number (shipping costs).
