

Not Even Afraid Of An Uromastyx

135 EUR

Period : 20th century

Condition : Très bon état

Material : Other

Description

This prehistoric animal does not threaten me from the height of its twenty centimeters... The whiptail lizard or Uromastix is a peaceful herbivorous lizard with an impressive tail. Originally from the Sahara, it is also called Dob in Arabic. This reptile is of course characterized by its long, powerful tail which it uses as a weapon to defend itself. It feeds exclusively on plants, it is terrestrial, sedentary, diurnal and heliophilous... it's learned but everyone knows that a lizard loves the sun, even if they are not saurians of the Agamidae family. .. This one traveled from a steamship to a cabinet of curiosities in a small castle but I don't know when it was stuffed.

Dealer

Complément d'objets

sciences, ethnical, naturalia, artificialia, didactical items, curiosities

Tel :

Mobile : 00 32 477 450 595

Wemmel 1780