Louis Boulanger was a student of Guillaume Guillon-Lethière then of Eugène Devéria at the Paris School of Fine Arts.

Louis Boulanger was a noted and remarkable actor in the Romantic movement, an excellent colorist, in addition to his taste for ancient history painting in a troubadour spirit, he also devoted himself to mythological painting and genre scenes often inspired by literature.

A great admirer of Victor Hugo, he illustrated him extensively and made several portraits of the great man of letters and of his family. He also left a significant number of portraits of his contemporaries and friends including a famous Balzac kept at the Museum of Fine Arts in Tours, a portrait of Achille Devéria at the Louvre Museum.
