Description

very beautiful gilded bronze inkwell with a shiny polished finish highlighting the details of the finely chiseled decorative ornaments. The handles are decorated with dolphins, a symbol of elegance and power, bringing a touch of sophistication to the whole. The richly decorated top incorporates Neoclassical attributes already used in other periods of the history of styles. This is typically the characteristic of the style of the Napoleon III era. The tray has two pretty finely carved inkwells, each lid opens and closes through their hinge. This magnificent inkwell rests on four lion paws enhancing the elegance and finesse of this office object intended for high society in the 19th century. Excellent condition !
