Description

Pair of Italian Mid-Century Brass & Muranoglass mushroom shaped Table Lamps 1970s

The objects have a purist look, the glass body is slightly overdrawn and has air bubbles all over the surface, which gives the glass its liveliness. In the center is a hollow for the light bulb, this hollow has a small indentation at the edge where the glass blowing pipe was attached.

The glass has a warm, sand-colored hue.

The base is drawn downwards in a straight line in brass.

The special feature is the different heights of the objects, so they are a pair, but not quite the same.

This looks very interesting if you decorate them in such a way that both objects are placed in one - they have a modern, sculptural character.
