in particular for his female subjects sculpted in the Art Deco style, and whose bronze prints were mainly published by the famous Etling house. A "modern" artist, he also creates numerous subjects with sport, aviation or automobile themes, cars for which he creates the coveted mascots with great success.

Guiraud-Rivière was also an author of models for the Manufacture nationale de Sèvres between 1911 and 1923. He was also the author of humorous drawings and orientalist-inspired watercolors painted during a trip to Morocco in 1933. Back from Morocco, he creates posters for the Chemins de fer du Maroc and Air France.
