Description

Beautiful Athenian in mahogany and mahogany veneer with tripod base, finished with golden bronze lion's legs, embellished with two tablets and topped with a pretty slightly veined white marble light gray from Carrara (removable). Today saddle because it is covered with a marble, but at the beginning of the 19th century, this Athenian was garnished with a round porcelain and its aiguière serving as a sink. Time has passed since the empire and the porcelain has disappeared, or broken. We have therefore replaced, if we cannot find the model porcelain, with a marble top. The assembly has been completely restored with a pretty traditional stamp varnish and the marble has not been glued so as to see the flared work of the wood under it. Ideal to complete a decor from the late 18th and
