Description

The signature of this oil on panel is difficult to decipher. Maybe Alain Beaufreton, but I couldn't confirm it for you. It represents an academic nude with a man with slightly tilted eyes. The work is of quality, well executed. The frame is also from the 20th century. It is probably an oil on canvas having been cut out and repositioned on a panel. We report friction and small white spots on the oil, wear of the gilding on the frame. Note what we believe to be a facial level restoration on the left and right side from middle down, visible in the 10th and 11th photos. Note small gaps on the frame, traces and marks on the burgundy velvet. The work remains largely presentable, we are picky and point out the slightest little defect. We did a basic cleaning. Sold untouched. For the condition, please detail the photos. The photos are
